

TUITION REMISSION EXCHANGE GUIDELINES FOR PARTICIPANTS

The Great Lakes Colleges Association (GLCA) operates the GLCA Tuition Remission Exchange (TRE) program. The Thirteen member colleges of the GLCA and four other non-GLCA colleges participate. Students eligible for tuition remission because of parental employment at one of the participating colleges may receive tuition remission at one of the other colleges in the exchange. (Please note that Beloit and Grinnell are included as full participants on an inter-consortial basis only; student exchanges between Beloit and Grinnell will remain within the jurisdiction of the ACM exchange program).

Eligibility for the exchange is determined by the college at which the student's parent is employed. All other policies affecting the student are determined by the college the student attends.

Admission to the college the student wishes to attend will be determined through the regular admissions process established by that college, without regard to the applicant's potential eligibility for tuition remission. The student should file an application for admission in the usual way and pay all required fees and deposits for the college he or she wishes to attend.

Application to the TRE program must be made each year to the college at which the parent is employed. Copies of the application are forwarded to the GLCA office and to the admitting college.

A Student TRE Fee must be paid by the student each year. This fee is 15 percent of the mean charge of tuition for the participating colleges. The participation fee will be billed by the college the student is attending.

The charges included in the remission of tuition are determined by the college the student is attending. In general, tuition is defined to include all tuition and fees charged by the college with the exception of room, board, and special fees not charged to all students. The fees charged to students that are not included in the remission of tuition are listed on the back.

Each participating student should apply for all state and/or federal financial aid for which (s)he may be eligible. A student whose demonstrated need exceeds the remitted tuition should discuss the possibility of additional financial aid with the director of financial aid at the college (s)he plans to attend. Institutions participating in the GLCA TRE program, when accepting externally awarded financial aid for a TRE eligible student:

- May not use the external aid to discount the TRE benefit;
- Should consider the TRE Fee as tuition and thus students must be allowed to apply any external aid that can be used for tuition against the TRE Fee; and
- Should notify students of the amount of excess or unused aid, if institutional policy prohibits the student from using non-TRE aid (e.g. external scholarships, grants, etc.) for non-tuition expenses (e.g. room & board, fees, etc.).

Use of the TRE benefit toward off-campus study is determined by the college the student is attending. The current list of eligible programs follows these guidelines.

Participating students must be full-time degree candidates. Only charges for the regular academic year at the college attended are included. Tuition Remission is available for only 8 semesters or 12 quarters (four years) of study with case by case exemptions being permitted if both sending and admitting colleges agree. Participating students must make satisfactory academic progress, as determined by the college they are attending, in order to retain eligibility for tuition remission.
